NoHo Arts District Gets Ready for 4th Annual Lit Crawl L.A.

More than 36 NoHo venues open their doors to literature lovers, local authors and friends of the community on the Arts District's 4th annual Lit Crawl L.A. on Wednesday, October 26, 2016 from 6—10 p.m.

Authors from all over Southern California present readings, poetry and performances in NoHo's most popular bars, restaurants, galleries, theaters and other venues. Visitors get a chance to discover various indoor and outdoor locations while exploring LA's current literature scene.

Last year's Lit Crawl L.A. featured more than 3,500 attendees and 200 authors. The Los Angeles County Library's Bookmobile and the Los Angeles Public Library street librarians will be crawling and promoting

Come out to Crawl

Lit Crawl L.A., hosted in shops, gyms, restaurants and more across the NoHo Arts District, is a night of "literary mayhem" featuring numerous presenting reading series, organizations and writers. Book and beer pairing will be featured at limited locations within the Noho Arts District.

Lit Crawl L.A. looks forward to another year with talented young individuals and fresh faces. Stay tuned for more details!

Co-Founder's Corner: The Power of the Youth Voice

By Sally Shore, Executive Director

In all the hustle and bustle of working with the amazing Lit Crawl L.A. key volunteer team on this year's event, I was hit by literary lightning. Elie Wiesel passed just before the Independence Day holiday leaving with us a trove of truth, particularly Night which told of his time as a teen prisoner in Auschwitz and Buchenwald. Night's contemporary youth voice was, of course, Anne Frank - another teen writer whose diary revealed Nazi oppression in a way that only youth writers can.

As we approach October 26th, we see in our own time that the power of the teen literature is a unique window on the world that opens our hearts and minds to the challenges and injustice of our own time. Lit Crawl L.A. is very proud to include some promising and amazing teen writers among our presenters this year - please make a point of seeking them out and look for our full schedule coming very soon.
